Studies in the Life of Jacob Part 1: Jacob's Vision: The Founding of Bethel Allen P. Ross Introduction The clear revelation of God's gracious dealings with man can transform a worldly individual into a worshiper. It is a drama that has been repeated again and again throughout the history of the faith.

The story of Jacob's dream-vision at Bethel was highly significant for ancient readers of the Bible: it marked the first time that God appeared to Jacob or addressed him directly and was thus the start, in a sense, of his career as one of God's chosen servants. At the same time, a few things in this brief passage were puzzling.

God tells Jacob to go to Bethel and build an altar. Jacob tells his household to literally ditch their foreign gods under a tree at Shechem. When Jacob builds his second altar he calls the place El Bethel whereas before he called it Bethel...and it was called Luz. It is mentioned that Rebekah's nurse Deborah died.

Jacob's Dream At Bethel Sermon by Freddy Fritz, Genesis 28

Title: John 1:51 and the motif of “Jacob’s ladder” in Genesis 28:12 Researcher: Jaesoon Kim Promoter: Prof. Gert J. Steyn Degree: Doctor of Philosophy The motif of “Jacob’s vision” in John 1:51 is used to prove that Jesus was the apocalyptic Son of Man who fulfilled the promise that was given to Jacob through his dream in Genesis 28:12.
